Key Issues

SUPPORT MACY'S WORKERS

For nearly six months, Macy's Union Square workers have been at the bargaining table with management in an attempt to negotiate a new contract to address the mounting economic inequity that retail and other service sector workers face in our city.

Most pressing is the fact that the employee share of health care cost has become unaffordable for most Macy's workers and their families. Only one third of Macy's employees are enrolled in coverage. To insure a family of 4 an employee must pay $1078 monthly for a basic Kaiser care health plan.

UFCW-represented Macy's workers have been given no choice but to prepare for a possible strike. In response, Macy's recently flown 350 potential strike-breakers into the area. Our members are prepared to fight for a better future, but their success depends on the support of consumers and community leaders like you.
